The Garfield Fair has proved a flat failure financially and in every other respect.

NORTH CAROLINA has elected two Republican, six Democratic and one Coalition Congressmen.

JUDGE RIDDELL, of Morgan county, is in the field as a candidate for the Appellate Judgeship in this district.

THERE are 6,235 school districts in the state and schools were taught in 6,180 of them during the year 1881.

THERE is talk of a duel in Virginia between Senator Riddleberger and Captain McCarty, the trouble originating in political differences.

DR. J. T. UPDEGRAFF, the Republican Congressman elect from the Seventeenth Ohio District, died on Thursday night at his home in Jefferson county.

LOUISVILLE Post: Recent census figures regarding the literary attainments of the population of the various states, show that of the states having any considerable colored population only two have a smaller per cent. of illiterates than Kentucky. Of the southern states, only Maryland and Missouri have a similar per cent. of persons unable to read, while as many have twice as large a percentage. Kentucky's percentage of persons above ten years of age unable to read is twenty-two and a half; that of Virginia, thirty-four; North Carolina, thirty-eight; Florida thirty-eight; Mississippi, forty-one; Georgia forty-two; Alabama, forty-three and a half; South Carolina, forty-eight, and New Mexico, sixty.

Census bulletin containing the statistics of manufactures has just been issued. There are (or were when the census was taken in 1880, and all statements are made upon the data then obtained) 253,840 establishments. The capital required to keep them in operation amounts to $2,790, 223,506, almost twice the amount of the public debt! There are employed 2,025,275, males above sixteen years 551,753 girls above fifteen years, and 181,918 children under these ages. The people are paid in wages $974,919,674 in the course of a year. The materials employed are worth $3,394,340,029, and the value of manufactured products reaches $5,379,667,706. In the number of manufacturers, value of products, etc., New York stands first, and then follow in the order as given: Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts, Indiana, Missouri, Michigan, Wisconsin, New Jersey. New York alone maintains 42,739, manufacturing concerns, with a capital of $514,246,575. There are 364,551 male operatives and 137,393 female, with 29,529 children. The wages amount to $198,634,029 annually; the materials are valued at $679,578,650, and the products at $1,080,638,696.

NEWS BREVITIES.

Hannibal D. Norton, principal clerk of the finance division of the Post office Department, was removed Friday for alleged complicity with Star Routers.

It is in contemplation to discontinue small army posts where practicable, in the far west, and concentrate troops in a few central localities, of which Fort Douglass is likely to be one.

The Convention of Labor Unions met at Washington, D. C., and completed a permanent organization. Alexander M. Kenaday was made President, J. H. O'Brien, Secretary.

In Ross county, Ohio, Barbara Saucerbrie took a dose of poison (but not with fatal result) because her father abused her for marrying his hired man. Her father subsequently fired a bullet into his brain.

Near Pottsville, Graves county, Ky., Wednesday, two cousins named Sullivan, fought over a settlement, and one knocked the other down with an adze. In turn the other cut his assailant in the stomach with a knife, and he has since died.

Two children of Isaac Parker, a coal miner, aged eight and ten years, were left alone in his shanty, near Coalton, Jackson county, Ohio, last Tuesday while the father was at work. A keg of mining powder, which they discovered, was brought near the fire and exploded, demolishing the building and mangling the children beyond hopes of recovery.

FRANKFORT.

A Singularly Well-Constructed Acrostic.

Special to the Courier-Journal.

FRANKFORT, Dec. 1.—Those who are acquainted with the difficulty of making verse, mechanical though it may be, and the still greater difficulty encountered in writing acrostics when the ink of inspiration runs as thick as molasses in winter, can readily rise to an appreciation of the wonderful ingenuity evidenced by Maj. Henry T. Stanton in the construction of the following lines containing four names and his own initials. The four persons were a family group, of this city, being a gentleman, his wife, his son and his brother-in-law. Their names are M. Stuart Cann, to whom it was directed (running down every other line on the left,) Mary Plumley (running up every other line on the left, beginning at the third line,) W. E. Plumley and Thomas Trask (running down the right side, ending at "K,") and the initial H, second to last line, left side; T, last line, left side, and S, last line on right side:

Mayhap with sturdy effort, now,
You here will find a belle.
She's hidden deep in verse asleep,
Enchain-ed by a spell.
The work, I know, will puzzle you;
Let all your nerves be calm.
Upon my soul you'll find the scroll
More weighty than a gramma.
A belle, a beau, a man, a Boy,
Usurp this queer depot;
Right here, oh! youth, in solemn truth,
Let me declare it so.
Take up your line of search for them;
Please just begin at "A";
Count not amiss a word on this,
Yet slowly 'till you find it;
A harder task could not appear;
Rack not your brain for "A";
Now let your stems begin with M's,
And all shall end with "K";
Now go to work and make it out—
Make no name more or less;
Hunt every line for yours and mine—
Try hard—and don't you guess.

In order to gain two votes in the United States Senate, the Republicans, at the next session of congress, are quite likely to push through the bill admitting Dakota as a state. Republicans now in Washington are stating that the territory has an improved record in the payment of honest debts, and that the population is greater than a year ago. And still it is reasonable to doubt the opinion that a Republican congress will, under the present condition, become so immoderate as to admit as a state a section and people not entitled, at present, to such recognition.

The injunction against the Cincinnati News, the new Democratic paper, restraining it from receiving dispatches of the United States Press Association, was Saturday, vacated in the Common Pleas Court, at Cincinnati, until December 16, in order to obtain additional testimony. The News Company was required to give $10,000 bond to indemnify the plaintiff against damages.
